NOTABLE WOMEN AT WASHINGTON FOLLOW
DISTINCTIVE TASTES IN MATTER OF DRESS

By MARGARET WADE.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—"Every body in Washington seems to be somebody," is the naive way in which a discerning young woman new to capital society expressed her interest in meeting not only our present-day dignitaries (who are still quite plentiful, despite the conspicuous absences in Paris), but the sons and daughters of famous men whose deeds and words have helped to make our nation's history.

The occasion which led to the remark was the drawing-room talk of Mrs. Roswell Randall. Hoes, the former Miss Rose Gouverneur, granddaughter of James Monroe, fifth president of the United States and author of the now world-famous Monroe Doctrine. Mrs. Hoes and her sister, Miss Maude Gouverneur, life-long residents of the capital and fixed stars in its social firmament, are particularly prominent just now, not only by reason of their illustrious progenitor, but by reason of Mrs. Hoes' contribution to history in the form of a collection of historic gowns, which she has assembled and placed in the National Museum, where any visitor to Washington may study the taste of the first lady of the land from the time of Washington to Roosevelt.

The latest addition to the collection is the gown worn by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt to the inaugural ball of March 4, 1905. This particular gown of blue and silver brocade should have particular attention for several reasons besides the obvious one of its historic value—which it shares with other pieces in the collection. It is first of all a "made in America" gown, of American grown and woven silk, presented to the wearer by the manufacturer, with the assurance that with her acceptance of the gift, the design would be destroyed, hence the gown would remain unique.

It is, furthermore, the last inaugural ball gown ever worn by the president's wife, as this Roosevelt-Fairbanks ball was the last so-called function of its name ever given. The ball, arranged in honor of the Taft and Sherman inauguration, March 4, 1909; while President Wilson made it clear, before leaving Princeton in 1913, that this time-honored celebration should be eliminated from his inauguration, a resolution repeated four years later to the disappointment of the majority of inaugural visitors.

Mrs. Hoes, in describing the museum collection of gowns limited to those of the respective mistresses of member of the class at the entrance of the ballroom, wore a one-piece serge dress, in dark blue, combined with black satin and the well-cut square neck, which was finished in turnover collar of white batiste. Mrs. Spencer wore a gown of the same description, with a round, low-crowned hat, trimmed in dark dabbles of rich red. Mrs. John Hays Hammond also wore a serge gown in black or very dark blue, with its collar and cuffs of heavy Russian lace. Mrs. Hammond wore no ornaments, while her becoming hat was a large tricorn of black Milan, trimmed in a scant bow of glycerined ribbon, the bow placed far to the back.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, wife of the assistant secretary of the treasury, a very recent acquisition to the administration circle, and one of the most faithful members of this company, wore a brown serge suit on smart lines, with round hat of brown Milan turned well up at the left side, where it was held by a fan-shaped rosette of grosgrain ribbon of the same color.

Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood wore a checked coat suit of blue and black, with one of the ribbon-made round hats, all in dark blue, with a tiny cluster of gay flowers on the edge of the brim.

Miss Beatrice Fairfax, the extremely youthful fiancée of Lieutenant Theodore E. Chandler, U. S. N., is going about completing her trousseau in an all-black suit, with coquettish small hat, also in black. The collar of the snappy little coat is of white. The wedding of this couple will take place soon, when Lieutenant Chandler expects to be assigned to the U. S. destroyer Chandler, the new ship named for his late grandfather, William E. Chandler of New Hampshire, senator from that state for many years, and one-time secretary of the navy.

BUSINESS-LIKE

In every family it is the housewife who has the spending of the larger part of the income. Surely, then, she should strive to be business-like, because where money is spent there is always need of strictly business methods.

If you wish to give an order for anything involving the expenditure of considerable money, write it; do not telephone the order. For instance, if you want to make arrangements to have a telephone installed in or taken out of your house, if you want to have your milk order discontinued, it is better to write the order and sign it. Thus there is no misunderstanding concerning the time when the order was sent there will always be a written statement and not a memory of a telephone call to back you up.

If you are ordering anything that has to be sent for especially, or that necessitates the use of materials in the making, it is customary to leave a deposit. Thus, if you are ordering a pair of shoes that your shoe man does not find it to his advantage to keep on hand regularly, or if you are getting a hat made to order, you should take it for granted that you will be required to leave a deposit. So, if you are asking a real estate agent to give you the option on a house or apartment, it is a matter of course for you to leave a portion of the first month's rent, which you forfeit in case you decide not to take it.

If you can't pay bills regularly ask for "time" in a business-like way. In some business transactions buyers have thirty days or sixty days in which to pay for goods after delivery. This is settled before hand. Now if you are not going to pay your grocer until the bill has run for four or eight weeks, it would be far better to tell him so to begin with.

THINGS TO REMEMBER

Though it gives an inferior flavor, lard makes a more tender crust than butter.

An attractive dessert is different colored gelatin creams in layers in sherbet glasses.

Cold tea used on varnished floors or woodwork of any kind will give it a beautiful luster.

Try dipping liver in milk before frying. It will fry a nice brown and will not be hard.

Curtains in any special shade are required by dipping scrim in any commercial dye.

One-fourth teaspoonful of soda added to boiling cabbage destroys any disagreeable odor.

To be sure of unadulterated pepper one may purchase a small pepper grinder and make it.

The marshmallow boxes can be covered with white and made into delightful candy boxes.

A charming little bonbon basket can be made by covering a finger bowl with crocheted raffia.

FOREIGN TRADE
BEING STUDIED

Speakers at St. Louis Convention Enforce on Hearers Important Features.

DUTY OF PEOPLE

American Machinery and Inventive Genius Belong to the World Says President.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 29.—Foreign trade and transportation will be important factors in America's future prosperity and should be given closest study by the public, speakers declared today at the trade convention of the United States chamber of commerce.

George Edward Smith, president of the American Manufacturers' Export association, expressed the sentiment of the foreign trade section of the convention when he said "foreign trade represents more than an opportunity; it represents a responsibility that we cannot shirk."

"American machinery and inventive genius belong to the world more than ever at this time. Sound business judgment and our duty to humanity comes to become a real exporting national life."

The committee today submitted a report on government control of operation of railroads and urging that the roads be returned to their owners "as soon as remedial legislation can be enacted."

It recommends further, that in the public interest, roads be permitted to consolidate into strong competing systems "so located that each of the principal traffic centers shall, if possible, be served by more than one system."

Other recommendations included creation of a federal transportation board to promote development of a national system of rail, water and highway transportation.

The public utilities committee also submitted a report declaring that the street railway industry throughout the country had reached a critical situation through increased cost of operation and recommended that the committee be given authority to hold hearings and acquaint the public with conditions.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Organizations assigned to early convoy were announced today as follows:

Third engineers service company; bakery companies Nos. 102 and 340; 116th train headquarters and military police; 8th air service casual company; 20th engineers, headquarters 50th battalion, headquarters Seventh battalion, 13th, 14th, 18th, 20th and 21st companies, medical detachments of 19th, 20th and 21st companies, and the 803rd pioneer infantry.

HOW TO JUDGE A WOMAN
BY HER HAIR

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness, or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good shampoo. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthox from your druggist, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil, and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Advertiser.

JAPS OPPOSE SCHOOL BILL

Honolulu Senator Tables Foreign Language Measure of Territorial Legislature.

HONOLULU, T. H., April 28.—The foreign language school bill, strongly opposed by Japanese educators, was tabled today by the senate of the territorial legislature.

The foreign language bill was an amalgamation of two measures pending for nearly two months. The first of these proposed close supervision of all foreign language schools in Hawaii. It was followed by a more drastic measure requiring all school teachers in public and private schools to hold certificates to be issued by the department of public instruction. To obtain certificates, under this bill, teachers must show a knowledge of the English language, American history and American civics. The revised measure, tabled yesterday, retained this feature.

Japanese editors and educators declared passage of this bill would force Japanese language schools to close because of inability to get teachers with the required qualifications.

Japanese recently adopted resolutions declaring further efforts would be made for "Americanization" and
